Every summer, Bill and his parents go on vacation. This year they drove to the beach, and Bill spent an unforgettable day.

It took them three hours to drive to the beach. While Dad was parking their car, Mom and Bill went to find a good place on the sand. Bill soon met a boy of his age and went over to greet him. The boy told Bill he was Tim and invited Bill to play in the water together.

They ran in and out of the water. They were having a great time. Suddenly, a big wave came. Tim fell down and was carried away off the shore. He was in danger. Bill was frightened. He looked around and spotted a lifeguard nearby. He quickly ran to him, waving his hands and shouting for help. The lifeguard rushed to the water, swam to Tim and brought him safely back to shore. Just then, Bill's and Tim's parents hurried to the scene. Tim's parents were fearful and thankful. They realized that without Bill's quick action, Tim might have been drowned (淹死).

That night Tim's mom invited Bill and his parents to dinner. The two boys became good friends. They would never forget the lessons from the matter—keep safety in mind and seek help in time.
